1 Tony set off for home again without having lunch. As usual, one of the older boys had taken his packed lunch. On his way, Tony stopped at the park, trying to control his anger: Suddenly, he saw a wasp (黄蜂) flying about among the rose bushes, and he felt a bit frightened.

2 How could something so much smaller than himself frighten him like that? He spent a while looking at the wasp, and finally found out the reason. A wasp could never fight a person, but everyone was so afraid of its sting (毒刺). Tony spent that night wondering what his "sting" could be.

3 The next day, Tony was confident and ready to face up to anything, with his mind on his new role of frightening people.

4 The boy who stole his packed lunch that day ate a very hot sandwich, and ended up crying and coughing. Another older boy wanted to hit Tony, but this time Tony didn't run away. He told the boy the phone numbers of his parents, and said, "If you hit me, they'll find out the truth, and you'll be punished." A boy wanted to take one of Tony's toys. Instead of giving it to him in fear, Tony gave the boy a small card written by a policeman he knew. It read, "If you rob this boy, I'll come after you and I'll even lock you up."

5 All of Tony's tricks worked. In the end, Tony became a boy like the wasp he'd seen. Without "stinging" anyone, he could stop anyone from bullying him into doing anything.
